Every class C taxi companies in South Carolina follow rules, regulations and standards which governed by public service commission, Office of Regulatory Staff, the City, Columbia metropolitan airport and department the of police. These include obtaining certificates from authorities, proof of physical fitness, drug test. back ground clearance from South Carolina Law Enforcement Division. In contrast, Uber does not follow none of the above mentioned rules and regulations while operating shared rides in the State of South Carolina.

In addition, the traffic law in the State of South Carolina required chauffers to carry commercial insurance while in vehicle motion. Without considering public safety and does not follow the traffic law with related to public transportation, Uber does shared rides in the state of South Carolina.
